International Humanitarian Service Leadership Program (ISLP)

As part of the International Red Cross Movement, we dedicate ourselves to: Protect human life, Care for the health of the vulnerable & Respect human dignity.

International Humanitarian Service Leadership Program (ISLP), organized by Youth and Volunteer Department since 2005, nurtures university students as humanitarian leaders with global humanitarian vision and action with a mission to influence the Hong Kong society. The program facilitates students to develop caring and concern projects on humanitarian issues. A platform is formed by the students to act as a group of new power to spread the message about humanity to peers and public in Hong Kong so as to raise their awareness about different humanitarian issues. They can then present impact to change the world.

OUR CORE VALUES

Humanitarian Leadership Qualities

By working on both individual and collaborative actions on humanitarian issues, students are encouraged to act and spread the message of humanity to others. Furthermore, students would motivate more people to respond to human sufferings around the world with solidarity, and to shape for a better world together.

Humanitarian Global Vision

By experiencing humanitarian issues in-person, students would be empowered to develop holistic perspective on these issues around the world, to link themselves with the communities, and ultimately reach out to help.

Humanitarian Voluntary Service

By planning service programs and direct services, students would be able to reflect on the real needs of service recipients and to reconsider their inherent perceptions on voluntary service.

Before joining ISLP, I never thought of myself going to Sri Lanka and did not expect to know humanitarian issues like civil war, internally displaced person, child soldier and tsunami affected problems.

In the process of planning, I have learnt how to integrate our bold ideas with the children's needs in order to create our own Voluntary Teaching Project.

Participant of the Hong Kong Polytechnic University Hong Kong Community College (Heyuan Voluntary Teaching Project)

I remembered that our Red Cross mentor had asked us the reasons to become doctors. I told him that I want to light the fire of life. Apart from listening to patients stories, I want to bring them hope which can lighten up their lives.

Participant of the Chinese University of Hong Kong (Vietnam Agent Orange Caring Project)

Holding hands with them and hugging them touched me deeply. Education is the right of every individual, so are communicating with one another and being respected. Every person is playing the role of a teacher and a student at the same time.

The refugee concern project in Thailand made me realize that, to serve the people in need and to treasure what we have is the essence of humanitarian service.

Participant of the Hong Kong Baptist University (Caring for the South Asians)

When we are unimpaired, it is really hard for us to understand the pain and sorrow of the disabled; when helping the others, we need to take others' dignity and feelings into consideration.

Participant of ISLP Volunteer Team (Yuan Liu Voluntary Teaching Project)

I saw my teammates' compassion from their tears, the tears made me happier to work with the whole team. Even though we all differ in personalities, we hold the same spirit of voluntary humanitarian service.

ISLP Volunteer Team, past participant of the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (Embrace Africa - Kenya)

We are no "humanitarian workers" nor did we "served" anyone; We are just ordinary "volunteer" who manifest the most basics of human compassion towards each other, and spread the message of humanity across
